Poem 8
The Pilgrims

by Bobbi Katz

In the year of 1620
On a cold December day
A hundred and two pilgrims
Sailed into Plymouth Bay.
Still wary from their voyage -
Still gracing winter's chill—
They kept their sights on freedom
With courage, work, and will.
Pilgrims did not stop to think
Of riches, fame, or glory
While bravely playing starring roles
In our new nation's story

The days are getting shorter now.
I feel a snowflake on my brow.
The leaves are crackling as I run,
The squirrels' searching almost done.
The turkey's restless in the pen,
Oh! No! I see my breath again!
It makes a person take a pause
And think about old Santa Claus!!!
